AIM OF THE CONFERENCE

Emerging Market and Development Economies (EMDE) are currently facing challenges and the existing status of them is interwoven with the frail performance of the Large Emerging Market (LME) economies which is a serious issue of concern for global development. The global growth during 2019 was 2.6 percent which was much lower than expected due to declining trade and investment echelon. The global financial crisis also caused global downturn which is vividly seen in uneven development, wide gap between access to opportunities and population groups in terms of their geographic areas, status of structural transformation, monetary and fiscal situation, debt conditions, competition and survival, gender economic status, quality and quantity of infrastructure, type of technology used, rural and urban divide, conditions of human development indicators, poverty, food security, sustainable economic growth and inclusion etc. Altogether, during 2019 the global growth had remained weak, however, in the beginning of 2020, the world economies are showing recovery and the momentum for growth is being prepared by the countries with their limited policy space. The development policies of India try to address these issues and subtle efforts are being made to combat the growth retarding forces that pummels the structural transformation and growth trajectory of the economy. The demonetisation and tax reforms implemented by the government are articulated as growth-sapping boondoggle. The aim of the conference is to assess the reality of such economic situation and to recommend appropriate policy formulations to achieve all round development of our country.
