

Editorial Note

Greetings to all the readers and well-wishers of the Journal of Development Economics and Management Research Studies (JDMS) in the midst of lockdown formula followed in many countries to drive the COVID-19. The WHO has directed all the countries with an appropriate policy formulation to combat the menace of the deadly COVID. The lockdown period varies from countries to countries and this action is inevitable to save the people from this pandemic virus. COVID has impacted the world economies in general and very severe in the developing countries, as they are already fixed with many inert and innate problems. The economic impact of COVID-19 will be manifold and it had shaken the very base of these countries. Monetary and fiscal policies promulgated by them may provide relief to the people and business, but its long term effect is going to be still worse than their prophecy. It is time for the countries to take stock of the situation persisting in their economies and it is suggested to discuss with experts, economists, scientists, academicians, business people, industrialists, farmers, bankers, political parties, international agencies etc., to prepare a COVID AMELIORATING policy.

We wish all the people to stay at home and comply with the Government order in total. Social distancing, cleaning their hands with soap as per the procedure, self isolation etc., are the order of the day and have safe stay at home till the Government relaxes the lockdown. This is inevitable to save ourselves and the society at large.

We invite scholarly articles from people across the field as per the guidelines given in this website.
